Mrs. Purcell was first called to the stand by Attorney Smith. She testified that they were married June 18, 1912, and that they were married June 18, 1912, and that her husband was cruel to her almost from their marriage day. She was on the stand about two hours and told a long story of the troubles of the family and of her husband's drinking hubits. She said she was afraid of him and would not dare to go back to live with him. When her husband came on the stand later in the day he flating contradicted about everything she testified to concerning his drinking or his treatment of her.

Coughlin—Quian.

At St. Mary's church on Wednesday out nights and not come back till the next morning. He told his wife that next morning. He told his wife that the sister must either stay home nights the sister must either stay home nights or leave the place. The sister was married and her husband was in New London. In order to make his wife better satisfied the witness said he bought an automobile, taught her to run it and she had it to go to dances and the moving pictures at aight while he stayed home with the beby and his mother in law. Mrs. Purcell kept urging him to sell the farm, witness said and him to sell the farm, witness said, and he finally sold it for $4,100 and paid off a lot of outstanding debts. Since the third of last April he has given his wife $585 in cash which was from the proceeds of the sale of the farm.

At present the witness said he is work-ing for his father and is getting $25 a month and his board and washing, He has no other resources. The witness testified to their going to live at the Thomas Day place in Salem, although he told her it was ne place for them. They gave Day and his son their board for the place and later charged them $1 a day for the board of Floyd Day. It was never paid. Day told him he would have to sue for it.

Mr. Purcell testified to a conversation with his wife at Canterbury two weeks ago, when she told him she wanted vorce more than anything else and that she wanted a year for a good time and after that, when she came back, she would marry him again if he wanted to. She advised him against trying to col-lect the bill for Floyd Day's board, as Purcell denied that he was habitually drunk from September to the time that the farm was sold. He denied that he offered Day a drink in a hay field, or told Day that he had shot twice at his wife through the windshield of the au-tomobile, but didn't hit her, or that he told Day he was going into the house to cut the heart out of his wife.

Purcell also denied that he had don as his wife had testified in grabbing a jackknife, pushing her up against a door and threatening to cut her heart Beebe's court where he was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication that he was guilty of all this and more. When he pleaded gullty he meant brother, Patrick, who resides in Yonkers, that he was guilty of breach of the and many nephews and nieces.

of many of her grandchildren. He still Judge Brown questioned Purcell about his testimony as to two purchases of li-quer he made for his wife on a prescrip-tion obtained from a doctor. In answer to the judge's question, Purcell said he got the prescription from Dr. Howland and bought the liquor at Buell's.

Rebuttal Evidence

When the defense rested at this point.

Attorney Smith recalled Mr. Purcell to the stand and asked him why he didn't want to go to live at the Day place. Purcell answered that it was no place for them to live as there were too many peo-ple coming there at all times and for improper purposes.

To Attorney Troland, Purcell said what he meant by this was that Day's place was known as a clder hole. He denied that he over bought hard clder there.

Mrs. Purcell was recalled by her own attorney. She desied the convergation that Purcell said took place between her bashand and herself at Cantenbury, according to the testimony of Purcell, but said that what he did say to her was that if she got her divorce, there would be three people he would shoot befor, he lailled nimself. He told her who these were, she said, but she was not asked to name them in court.
